SHEPPARD DRY BILL

Legislative Situation In Senate May Prevent Vote on D. C. Prohibition This Session.

Early consideration by the Senate of the Sheppard bill for prohibition in the District seemed unlikely today. Senator Sheppard told the Senate yes terday, while explaining his amendments to the measure, that he would call it up at the first opportunity. But the legislative condition in the upper house indicated that it will be some time before the bill can be considered. With the rush on to pass preparedness and other big general legislation, there is a serious question whether a coto on the Sheppard bill can be forced this session unless the session should prove a protracted one.

Already there is developing a strong disposition among some of the leaders to hurry the session to a close in June. Although it will probably be impossible to do this, some of the leaders see in the early cleans of the session a chance to sidetrack much legislation to which they are opposed or which they prefer should wait until after election. Senator Sheppard in his explanation of the bill dwelt particularly on the fact that as he had modified the measure personal use of liquor would be permitted. He also emphasised that alcohol and liquors for scientific, pharmaceutical, medicinal, manufacturing and sacramental purposes were permitted.
